Facts About a Splendid Section of Western Kan: at. and of Dighton, Its Metropolis.

Entering Lane county from the west one is not particularly impressed with the idea that a grand transformation of the landscape is taking place on account of the fact that one is passing from Scott into Lane county, and any one who expects such a change does not know southwestern Kansas, for county lines are not marked by water courses, mountain ranges, nor heavy growths of timber, but by section lines. The eleven counties comprising what may be called southwestern Kansas are quite similar in many respects, but each and every one of them has some peculiarity of its own. One county may be generally level, another will be quite rolling.

may be at the present writing sparsely set-tled, another very thickly set-tled. Lene county is no exception to the general rule. It has rolling land, living streams of water, nat-ural water courses which have at certain seasons of the year plenty of water, but which are at certain other seasons of the year, dry. It has slight elevations of land which are not sharp but broad and abundantly covered with buffalo and blue stem, offering abundance of feed for the grazing stock. Between these elevations are broad, level flats of from one to five miles wide; panied by E. A. Hamerstick, paid the Eagle these flats are equally well adapted to agricultural pursuits and judging from the manner in which the county has been set-St. Louis and San Francisco Railway.-Free here found the long locked for home of his dreams and he has good cause to thank the Giver of all good for guiding his footsteps
